

Houston DWI Arrests

Article by: Max Bellamy

With the increase in car culture, vehicles sales have been shooting through the roof. The problem with this is that the roads are not correspondingly increasing. If only they would, everyone would be driving like those F1 drivers on Houston roads. But there are drunken people driving at breakneck speeds, in the middle of the city. Drinking and driving don't go hand in hand. You will be convicted for a DWI conviction if your blood alcohol level is 0.08 or more in Houston.

There is also tremendous social pressure on the law enforcement agencies to make DWI arrests. Drunken driving is an offense and a social menace, after all. Law enforcement agencies are in a way forced to get tough. DWI arrests have been beneficial in slowly reducing this menace.

Only under certain circumstances are you in danger of being sent to prison. For example refusing to give a sample of blood or breath may get you a jail term. However, if you are hiring the services of a good Houston DWI attorney, he can point out the faults in the chemical testing procedures and can protect you or at least reduce your punishment.

There are other circumstances under which you can be arrested for a DWI offense. If you are involved in a DWI conviction while driving at high speeds or you may have been involved in an accident which involves children, the consequences will take that into account. The examples are many; one needs to go through the laws in detail to find out the circumstances under which one can be arrested. You can find out more about these laws from leading attorneys who have online resources. Whatever may be case, it is imperative that you act fast and hire the services of a good Houston DWI attorney.
